ANCIENT TRAILS AND SMALLHOLDINGS At the heart of Seljord lies Nordigard Bjørge with views across the serene Lake Seljordsvatnet, best known for its alleged sea monster. The lush landscape has attracted people to the area since the Stone Age. Several archaeological finds have been made on the farm. Local place names have also been uncovered along the old footpaths in Bjørgefjell. In the olden days every little nook and cranny would have a name, a name that said something about what the site was used for, about people or about places in the landscape. Bjørgefjell is full of ancient trails and paths winding their way through the cultural landscape surrounded by remains of old smallholdings and mountain farms with pastures and hayfields. There are numerous idyllic spots along the way where you can stop, rest and enjoy the panoramic views of Lake Seljordsvatnet.

NATURE AND CULTURE

Telemark cattle

THE TELEMARK CATTLE were defined as a separate breed in 1865. The cattle had their heyday in the years that followed and was a big attraction at the annual market festival. There are now few animals left, and the breed is at risk of extinction. Nordigard Bjørge is one of very few farms rearing this distinctive alpine cow, which has a very unique temperament. She is sociable, playful and curious! From her milk the hosts on the farm create the most delicious ice-cream with flavours added from local produce. A visit to Nordigard Bjørge will awaken all your senses!

Description of the walk

IN BJØRGEFJELL you can choose from a number of different footpaths through the cultural landscape. The lower part of the route is graded easy to medium, while the final ascent to the top of Mount Bjørgefjell is steeper and more challenging. There are great vantage points and benches along the way. On this trip you will encounter remains of old smallholdings and clearance cairns. In the hills you may well bump into grazing Telemark cattle and wild sheep. Be considerate of grazing animals and remember to close the gates behind you. Spending time with the farm animals is always a hit with the children. Perhaps you will be able to help the farmer with the daily chores or take the rabbits for a walk? You can start the trip from either Nordigard Bjørge or Seljord Camping. There is easy access from the main road.
